

Hayley Landry is grateful to have been a part of the Ontario circus community since 2012, when she joined a social circus troupe with a focus on mental health. Since then her role has expanded from student to performer and instructor, and assistant program director. Hayley co-created and performed in many full-length stage productions, as well as a circus documentary film. She continues to develop and share skills in aerial, stilt walking, and acro, and juggling. She has found profound meaning in looking at how the worlds of circus and mental health connect, and using circus as a tool for storytelling and empowerment.
